The AVERT Family Violence training package is an innovative, multi-disciplinary training package that assists workers to respond effectively to family violence. Designed for workers at all levels within the community services, health, family law and human services sectors. The training provides sound and practical information for responding appropriately and promoting safety for all involved.

The aim of the AVERT package aims to provide workers at all levels within the family law system with:

- A sound and practical understanding of family violence, its impact and appropriate responses to promote safety for everyone involved
- A stronger capacity for multidisciplinary collaboration through greater understanding and recognition of the different professional roles and their functions.

The AVERT Family Violence package promotes:

- Realistic and 'joined up' work practices
- The foundations to ensure staff have accurate knowledge and responsive attitudes in combination with specific skills, to conduct screening, risk assessment and triage/safety planning with their clients, or to collaborate for the achievement of this
- Awareness of the impact of violence on families, especially children
- Awareness of the importance of the positive influence quality service responses can have in interrupting the cycle of violence and support recovery for all involved.

Iain Henderson from The Australian Institute of Social Relations has developed a Family Law specific package that he will deliver to the Pathways Network. See over for information about Iain.
